BROKEN TIES.

BY JAMES MONTHOMERY. The broken ties of imprier days, How often do they a em To come before our mental guze, Like a remembered dream. Around us each dissevered chain Is specifying ruin lies; And excelly hand shall noter again. Unite these broken ties.

The parents of our youthful home, he kindred that we loved, Far from our arms perchance may roam, a desert sem reserved. Off we have watched their parting breath, And closed their weary eyes; And sighed to think how saily death Can sever human ties

The friends, the loved ones of our youth, They too have gone or changed, Or worse than all, their love and truth Are darkened and estranged. They meet us in the glittering throng; With cold averted eyes. And wonder that we weep their wrong, And mourn our broken ties,

Ch! who in a harsh world like this Could bear his lot of pain, Did not one radiant hope of bliss, Unclouded yet remain. That hope the Seversign Lord has given,
Who reigns above the skirs,
Hope that nulies our souls to Heaven, By faith's enduring tion.

Each care, each Ill of mortal birth, Is sent in pitying love,
To lift the lingering heart from earth,
And speed its flight above, And every pang that wrings the breast, And every joy blist dies. Tel's us to seek a purer rest. And trust to holier ties.

RY JOHN G. WHITTIER. Heap high the farmer's wintry heard! Heap high the Golden Corn! No richer gift hes Autumn poured From out her lavish horn.

Let other lands exulting glean The apple from the pine,
The crange from the glossy green,
The cluster from the vine:— We better love the hardy gift Our rugged rales bestow. To these us when the storm shall drift Our harvest-fields with snow,

And grames green and young. And marry bob links, in the wood, Like mad municinus sung, We dropped the seed o'er hill and plain, Beneath the sun of May,

And frightened from our sprouting grain The robber-crows away. All through the brightest days of June, Its leaves grow this and inir, And waved in hot midsummer's man Its soft and yellow bairs

And now, with Antumu's moonlit eves, We pluck away the frosted leaves. And bear the treasure home. There, richer than the fubled gift:

Of golden showers of old, Fair hands the broken grain shall sift, And knewlilts ment of gold. Let vapid idlers loft in ailk Around their costly heard, Give us the bowl of samp and milk,

By homespan besuty peared. Where'er the wide shi kitchen hearth Sends up its smoky curls, Who will not thank the kindly earth, And bless our corn-fed girls! Let earth withhold her goodly root,

Let mildew blight the rye, Give to the worm the omitand's fruit, The wheat-field to the fly: But let the good old grop adera The hills our fathers trod; Still let us for His Golden Corn Send up our thanks to God.
